“Back To The Stables” By Jay Boyd Kirkman

After a race, unplaced horses congregate at the far end of the paddock. Above all, one of the judges boxes, stands sentinel. Eventually, all go their separate ways; jockeys carrying their saddles back to the weighing room, horses are led back to the stables and the remaining connections disperse around the racecourse facilities.

£60 each (Image Size: 9”x 14” Paper Size: 11”x 16”)
